Team Du Toit at Wimbledon

The weekend of the actual Wimbledon finals brought some excitement to the Irene Country Club as well, when they held their annual Wimbledon grass court tournament. The lure of fantastic prizes and some insanity drove a few of the Elarduspark members to the cricket field (sorry, grass courts) of Irene Country Club on a freezing winter morning.

Due to the fact that Johan likes to test his marriage every now and again he convinced me to enter with him. I figured that the chances for me to actually ever play a match with my husband as doubles partner were quite slim and went to pick out an outfit for the day.

The frosted grass courts greeted us on the Saturday morning and we contemplated going back to bed. But we were already spotted and I was wearing my outfit (with some additional layers on top).

The first greeting was from my high school crush and I was terribly happy that I had bothered with my hair that morning. Then I got issued with a tennis ball and a glass of sparkling wine and my spirits were picked up tremendously.

Couples were divided into 4-6 evenly matched groups and we played 7 matches on Saturday. I would like to refer to the game as adventure tennis. A ball would be served and bounce off a sprinkler head, the lines would be invisible and frequently someone had to hop over the low divide to fetch a ball from three courts down. The courts were also quite a bit shorter than an actual tennis court, so even I could serve and volley.

After the Saturday evening braai I had an opportunity to wear my second outfit on the Sunday when the fun continued. On this day we were divided into 6 groups according to our placement of the day before.

All in all – a fantastic weekend with a very efficient doubles partner. We hope to see some more players from Elarduspark there next year.
